Lucy Boston is a great book. It is one of the keepest as: res we have ever seen. A STORY OF REPUBLICAN EQUALITY. C

A STORY OF REPUBLICAN EQUALITY.

BY SYDNEY A. STORY, Jac.

In one large Duodecime Volume, 540 pp. Price #1 25.

The tile would lead the reader to infer that it has somewhat to do with the question of Slavery, and such is the case; its tendencies are powerfully against the last tution. But it is, nevertheless, in the best sense a Novel, and not merely an Anti-Slavery tract in discusse. The characters and scenes have a vividices which of yacinus can impart to ideal creations; and whenver crimmences the book will find his sympathics as directly enlisted that he will be compelled to follow the fortunes of the cheming heroine to the conclusion.

CASTE is not a "sectional" book its blows full as much upon Northern as upon Nouthern society. And while the vast might read the book for the INTERNSE INTEREST OF THE STORY, it will awaken thinking men to a new phase of the all-absorbing question.

it will a waken thinking men to a new phase of the all-absorbing questien.

Notices by the press.

"The plot is simple, and wrought out with entire absence of exaggeration. But we have not read a book for many a day which took so strong a hold on the feelings, from the first page to the last. The delineation of negro character, though this forms a very small part of the story, or its sim, is admirable. The confiding and affectionate temper, the ready wit, the unaffected natural plety, and the many beautiful traits of this oppressed rece, are but praphically touched upon; while the unfolding of the dearest affections, and of the love that is dearer than life, is full of an irresiable pathos, far more subduigs than the bursts of eloquence scattered here and there, which, as prints, tell very much in a story.

"At this time, especially this eloquence cattered here and there, which, as prints, tell very much in a story.

"It is remarkable as a genuine American romance; there is not a foreign element in it; it is American in its very isloms, in its scenes, characters, and local descriptions.

"A shough it is an Anti-Slavery story, yet the facilings of the surfor are not at all'obtustive, and found scenible is doubten manners and lessitutions than the scenes it describes and they are so pulsably truthful and iffelike that they could only have been written by one who has lived long in a saveholding States.

"The story is wrought with great power, the characters most distinctly and foreibly siras n, and the happy denominent produces in the most natural manner. It only needed a trate ending to have made it the most intensely shorbing romances of American life which has yet been written. But others may think differently, and would worked out without being overworked." [N. Y. Daily Times.

"As a whole, "Caste" is a capitizatig and powerful work, the plot original, well cenceived, and admirably worked out. It cannot fail to prove a "sensation book," and find more readers even than the popular "Ida May," as it will be read more extensively at the South. No one who commences its perusal will lay it aside till the whole story is known. The author is evidently a practiced writer, a close observer of men and things, and familiar with rural life at the South as well as at the North."

[Bost in Transcript.

"It is written with power and pathos. The story is original, the incidents natural, and, indeed, as things now are, necessary.

"We have no donnt of the success of this new book."

[National Era.

"It is as distinctly original and novel as if its size to the predecessors, had never been written, and is scrictly a novel, and not an unit sixery tract disguised. True, its teachings are adverse to the institution of Sixery; but the reader draws this inference; it is not suggested other than as his own deduction from the events described. It is finely written, interesting, and cannot fail to count its readers by thousands." [Boston Atlas. Belleving this to be a work of genuine merit, unacceptionable in its cone, graceful in style, and absorbing in interest, the publishers ask for it the attention of the reading community.

Ready This Day: NEW WORK by the author of "Roughing

A NEW WORLD,
It in the State."

GEOFFREY MONCTON;

THE FAITHLESS GUARDIAN.

By Mrs. Moodis.

Author of "Roughing it in the Bush," 'Fiora Lindssy,' Life in the Clearings vs. The Bush," "Mark Hur ilestote," &c.
One handsome volume. Price, in cloth, $1.

The talented author of " Roughing It in the Bush " has thrown all her power into this work, which is by far the best of the many excellent ones that have issued from her pen; and we think will make a sensation both here and in England, as the most brilliant novel of the day. By special arrangement with Mrs. Moodie, and by a liberal outlay, this work is printed firs[‡] in this country, and the proof-sheets sent to Bentley, and published in England simultaneously with the issue here.

The characters in this work are drawn with a most master! hand, evincing a thorough knowledge of the mainsprings of he man action, and a deep ineight into the controlling position, which prompt us to good or to evil. The designing and wicked awyer, who proved so false to his trust, and who, like the loath. innecent objects committed to his charge, finds himself folled at last, and respen terrible harvest of blood at the hands of his own wicked and unfillal effepting. So true is it that " He who sows the storm Will reap the whirlwind."

The plot of the work is varied and striking; the contrasts vivid and facible, particularly between "my Uncle," the coll genius of the story, and the good Sir Alexander and his noble daughter, of the fort, and see good of alexanter and mandous age of, who, lovely and seedle—a beautiful thing in woman—" lets con-cealment, like a worm in the bud, feed on the damask of her check," and we turn, with a shudder, from the contemplation of this levely character to that of Dinah North, that more than fiend in human shape, who almost makes us blush to think that such monsters bear the human form. There is a fine moral tone pervading the whole book which cannot fall to do good We have space for only a few of the favorable notices of the Fress:

FROM THE BOSTON MAIL

"The work before us is unquestionably one of the mist exeiting and talented books that the Riskrean press has ever isstand. The the acters are drawn with great skill and are true to infe and human nature. It will make a great sensation."

FROM THE BOSTON TRAVFLUER.

"Geoffrey Moncton possesses at the characteristic excellences of the fair author's style, and the principal keroine of the story is a beautiful creation of feminine Leveliness and purity."

FROM THE EVENING JOURNAL, ALBANY.

"This is her latest, and we are disposed to believe her best work."

FROM THE ARGUS, PHILADELPHIA "The work is written in a vigorum style, and abounds in present of starting camestores, which seems to indicate that its subbor might have passed through incidents similar to those she so thrillingth describes." FROM THE BULLETIN NEW-ORLEAMS.

FROM THE BULLETIN NEW-ORDEANS.

ENGLISH NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.—
We learn from a well informed source that the enterprising eaterer for the newspaper reading public of Liverpool, Mr. Charles Willmer, who some two years or more ago started in that Lown the first daily newspaper that was ever published in Bagland, cut of the sieat castial, and which newspaper. The Terchern Daily Times, still leads the van of the provincial newspapers in that country, but just completed an arringament with the English Government for the chasper exportation of the newspapers of that country to America, and other countries. This arrangement, we understand, is exclusively available to Mr. Charles Willmer, who for the past ten years has been stradily and perseveringly endeavoring to obtain the end now successfully completed. The result to America, and to foreigners in America, will be the securing of such newspapers at thesper priors than heretofore. The whole of the English newspapers coming to this country hereafter will, we believe, be transmitted through the hands of this enterprising News Agent, who has his ageicy now in this country. At No. 107 Fulton-st., New-York. Beride the daily paper we have mentioned, we are reminded that Mr. Charles Willimer is the publisher and sole proprietor of a second daily published at the small prize of one has frame, and a weekly newspaper for the busy people, at the price of one penny sterling. This is certainly equal to cur Yankee enterprise. ENGLISH NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE.
